

Press Release

5 March 2015

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Leeds College of Art student scoops first prize in record-breaking UK photography competition

A Leeds College of Art student has won first prize in the annual UK Student Photography Competition 2014 'Motion', which attracted record-breaking entries.

Elliott Jagger, who is studying the Extended Diploma at Leeds College of Art, won first prize in the 'ILFORD PHOTO Student Photographer of the Year 2014 - DARKROOM' category for his print entitled "Light in the dark".

The photography contest, which is run by Ilford Photo and Harman technology Ltd, sought images on the theme 'Motion' and pulled in more than 1,000 entries. Entrants were required to capture images shot on Ilford or Kentmere black & white film and printed on traditional photographic paper.

Sixty three images were selected for the final judging round; four of these selected images were from Leeds College of Art students. The four shortlisted students were Asmaa Elgammal, Nick Colbeck, Wilf Dessent and of course the winner Elliott Jagger. Due to the record entry for 2014 it took the judges two sittings and lengthy deliberations before the winners were finally chosen.

Entries that made it through to the final judging stages can be viewed on Harman's Flickr page

Editor's Notes

For more information & more images contact:

Emma Morris, PR & Communications Officer, 0113 202 8044 or emma.morris@leeds-art.ac.uk

<http://www.leeds-art.ac.uk>